OFFICE: NO. 15 QUINCY NUMBER PREW, HAGANS & HALL PROPRIETORS.

FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 29.

THE Eastern democracy take the de fest of Pendleton with great complacency, but that of Andy Johnson goes hard with them. REPORTS to the Treasury Indicate tha its secret service force are about to unearth some startling counterfelling operations in New York. ABOUT fifty employees in the Gov-

delegate to the Constitutional Conven tion of Tennessee, of which body they hope to make him President, Hoy hard it is for a man of such irrepressible energies to follow in the quiet beat on paths of private life. The ex-President's element is conflict and perpetu al turmoit. He loves to be in hot water as the ducks love rain, and if the Geysers could only be transplanted and set up in Tennessee, Andy would naturally make his home near those fa mous Springs.

MR. JEFFERSON DAVIS' arrival at New Orleans is chronicled. He will tarry there but a short time, and then go to his old home in Mississippi. We understand that his ex-Excellency has some intention of turning planter.—Before leaving Baltimore, he busied himself with making inquiries in regard to many things which could only concern a man who contemplated the vocation of a cotton and sugar planter, Mr. Davis is not so well off in this world's goods that he can afford to lead an idle life, wandering here and there to make an item for a newspaper, or as a sort of target for the gibes of his entered in April or May a sort of target for the gibes of his entered in April or May a sort of target for the gibes of his entered in April or May a sort of target for the gibes of his entered in April or May a sort of target for the gibes of his entered in April or May a sort of target for the gibes of his entered in April or May a sort of target for the gibes of his entered in April or May and month not a contined to the northern and eastern arise of Kentucky.

At 3 A. M. on the 8th of January 1705, whose corner atone should be slavery, a considerable shock was felt at Kasmust labor to live, when out of the week of his hopes he saves nothing that the lesson which misfortune teaches, the territory of Illinois, and the start of the way.

At 3 A. M. on the 8th of January 1705, all others had better be gotten out of the way.

We refer this suggestion to the Treasury Department, which is straining every nerve to the accomplishment of the training every nerve to the accomplishment of the control of the way and the way.

Concerning Hats Perhaps there is no article of wearing apparel which conduces so much to the genteel or seedy appearance of the wearer as the hat. Dr. Holland argues in 'Gold Foil' that the cravat is the 'centre of dress,' the article of all others which should be studied in one's outfit. And yet a person however so well dressed in other respects if he sports a dilapidated beaver has a dilapidated look. On the contrary, a shiny, well cultivated' hat imparts a spruce, well-to-do appearance to the wearer. An English nobleman being once remoustrated with for wearing villainously bad hats, replied: 'If people know who I am, what does it matter? If they do not know who I am, it matters still less,' A London journal argues that tions. A Lonuon Journal argues that he was fully mistaken in both-suppositions. A lord in a good hat is considerably better than a lord in a bad one; and so, though perhaps in a minor degree and proportion, is every body else. The writer adds that there can be only one excuse for wearing a bad hat, and that is because you cannot afford to buy another. Then as to the notion that it is of no earthly consequence what outward figure you cut in the eyes of those who know you only for so many square feet of walking flesh and blood, there never was a more impudent error. There are certain civilities due to absolute strangers from every member of a social community, and being well dressed is one of them. It is seldom—is it ever?—your great man who neglects this. It is your little great man, your would-be Triton, who affects apperiority by mistaking and assuming attributes that have no connection with it. Nine times out of ten a sloven is a man brimming over with connect, who, if he could only contrive to gain a little modesty, would bear witness to its influence by attending to his attire. Women never forgive these inattentions. Many a man has been refused for want of a good tailor; and though the little little in the service of the little state in the little good of love is a reason. he was fully mistaken in both supposi-THE Paris correspondent of the London Telegraph, who boasts a peculiar intimacy with the Imperial family, gives this description of the Emperor's working cabinet at St. Cloud: "The Emperor writes on a flat mahogany table, of the Empire style, placed in the middle of the room. His usnal seat is a large, low-legged, leather arm chair, nearly all the other seats in the very unpretending studio being chairs caned in Panama straw. If it were not for souvenirs of Napoleon I. and Queen Hortense, nobody would suspect this to be the Emperor's cabinet. His Majesty indifferently uses quill or steel pens, and while he writes he scatters the residua of his cigarettes on the inkstand pints. Pictures of the Empross and Prince Imperial are placed on two annall easels on the writing table, and on each side of the chimmey-piece two photographs of the same. A paper weight contains the Image of Frince men never forgive these inattentions, Many a man has been refused for want of a good tailor; and though the little god of love is no great thing in clothes, he favors the suits of those who are more elaborately decked out than himself. It has been said that the tailor makes the man; it is certainly the tailor makes the husband.

This seems to be a sort of compromise arrangement on aliar before long. ABOUT METEORS. Startling phenomena, disturbance on, above and below the earth's surface are becoming unpleasantly frequent This morning we chronicle an account of a remarkable meteor which passed over Western Ohlo at an earlyhour Wednesday morning and exploded with heavy detonations near Forest Station. shaking houses and shattering windows like heavy artillery. these meteors is usually if not always metallic. They vary greatly in bulk, Meteoric masses have fallen on the carth's surface weighing more than a haif ton. Such a one is to be seen in the Smithsonian Institute at Whahing. They weighing (if we remember aright) over 1,400 pounds, and is almost pure iron, with the appearance of having been fused by heat. There are other meteoric masses on exhibition there of smaller size, also iron. The large mass referred to fell, we believe, somewhere in the Phillipine Islands.

Of course there are many conjectures, even among scientific men, as to the origin of meteors. It is generally oorseluded, however, that they do not come from the earth's surface, but are flying

A PINANCIAL panic is reported in California. It is said that one of the Directors of the Bank of California had failed for $3,000,000, and that there is a run upon some of the branches of that bank in the mining districts. One of the California banks has been trying to raise here $1,000,000 on some of its real estate, but without success.

The writer is of opinion, from the recorded facts, that the intensity of earthquakes increases as we pass from the Atlantic towards the Pacific coast, where the shocks of the North American continent are the most frequent and severe. He regards the area of the Mississippi as in sympathy to some extent with the Caribbean region, but at the generally pay for country. ### Another Maria Mark Story there was a slight movement of the earth at Nisgara Falls, and at ten minutes past two P. M., on the 25th of Angust, 1804, a strong shock made itself felt at Chicago, of which we have no detailed accounts.

But the great object the national debt.

Another Mari Sall was one that may be said to have continued.

There was great detailed accounts.

But the great convulsion of all was one that may be said to have continued from time to time over a period of two or three years, producing a more wide-spread disturbance than any known shock except the Lisbon earthquake of 1755. Baginning with a severe agitation on the 16th of Nov., 1811, and ending with an alarming movement on the 12th of Docember, 1818, this series of earthquakes extended over the whole basin of the Missiasippi, and caused great apprehension even on the Atlantic border. The church bells rang in the steeples of Charleston, S. C., and the mountains rooked around Kaoxville, Tenn. In the great West at that time the greater number of buildings were of logs and of one story. Should such a convulsion again shake that region, the massive warehouses of St. Louis and Chicago would probably come tumbling about the heads of the citizens, and the destruction of life and property would be immense.

Such a convulsion, the writer in the Atlantic thinks, is very likely to recuring the course of a century. May not architects do well to build with reference to such a possibility? In San NEW YRRE, Oct. 27, 1867. There was great excitement in Jersey City this evening, owing to a lecture by Edith O'Gorman, also called exister Thereas, who gave her experience of convict life. She said that it was generally supposed that the inmates of a convent had no desire for any husband other than a celestial one. This was a mistake, for they all hankered after a material spouse. She had seen six sisters in love with one priest, and as he could not return the affection of more than one, the other five agence. was great excitement in Jerand as he could not return the affection of more than one, the other five were always in a state of fearful jesicosy. The priests, who were supposed to spend their time in holy offices, were constantly occupied in making love to the Sisters. She had also seen considerable cruelty in the convent practiced upon children. At one time she saw a child, three years of age, whipped by a slater until blood flowed from its wounds, and then plunged into a tub of cold water. At the conclusion of the lecture Edith slipped out of the back door of the half, thus escaping a mob which was ready to mob her.

Prospects of the Maryland Election The New York Evening Post says: The New York Evening Post says:
Since the October elections in Pennsylvania, Onlo and Iowa, every one of which resulted in a Republican victory, the canvass in New York has assumed a very lively character. The Damorats in this State, who were anticipating an easy victory, now see that the attength of President Grant's Administration with the people is a formidable obstacle to them; while the Republicans are strongly encouraged by inding that the many errors and failures which have marked the recent career of the party have not been sufficient to diaguise from the people either the gendisgulse from the people either the gen-eral truth of their principles, or the erat truth of their principles, of the honesty and patriotism of their most influential leaders. The election now promises to be a very closs one, with every prospect that the Republicans will secure at least a majority in both branches of the Legislature, and with strong reason to hope that several of their candidates for State offices may also be chosen.

SUCCESSFUL CURRE OF DEAFNESS AND CATARRH.

Letter from W. H. Mottingly, Eq., Sheriff of Wood County.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA., March 18, '12, Dr. J. A. Reid:

DEAR SIR:—Your treatment for Catarria and Deafoess has proved highly successful in my son's case. He has been sifilted with both of the above diseases for fitteen years. Have applied to quite a number of eminent physicians before, but received no benefit, but your paniess treatment seems to be a specific for the above mainables, and won drecommend all shiftled to give you a call.

W.M. H. MATTINGLY.

Dr. J. A. Redt:

Dran Bir:—It affords me pleasure to attest to your skill, in the treatment of your several specialities. I have been affilted with Catarri, General beblifty, and Indigestion, (Dyspepsia,) for twenty years, and have riod a number of eminent physicians, before, and received no benefit, but your treatment has proved a success in my case. I make this statement for the benefit of them, and would active all who are affilted as I was to give the Doctor a call.

Respectfully yours,

R. P. STEED, Attorney.
